

Rosario López Gómez (de Marquez), age 56, died September 29, 1964, of medical negligence while in custody for political reasons

Rosario's family was from Camaguey province. The entire family was accused and tried for helping the anti-Castro rebels in the mountains (Docket No. 533 of 1964). Rosario was sent with other women in similar circumstances to a mansion in Miramar, Havana, that belonged to a family that had fled the island and had been turned into a detention center. She was denied medical treatment for her high blood pressure and died of a heart attack. Her husband and one son served 12 years in prison, another son served 18 years.
