Santiago	Aroca	Spain	Spain	Journalist	El Mundo (newspaper, Spain)	Beating / Detention / Deportation	16	Jan.	1992	Spanish journalist beaten, robbed, and expelled from Cuba after interviewing the family of an exile who had returned to Cuba and had been executed the prior week for attempted terrorism (Eduardo Diaz Betancourt). Authorities beat Aroca and demanded he tell them who had given him the address of the executed man's family. Police seized most of his belongings and placed him aboard a flight to Mexico. They returned a small part of his luggage but kept his notebooks, computer, newspaper clippings, books on Cuba, press cards, and the equivalent of $600 in cash. The Spanish Embassy in Havana filed a protest.	John Rice, "Spanish reporter expelled from Cuba," Mexico City, AP, Jan. 27, 1992. Le Grange	Bertrand	France	N/A	Journalist	Freelance journalist, former correspondent Le Monde Diplomatique (newspaper, France)	Beating / Arrest			1992	In 1992, Le Grange was staying at the Hotel Tritón of Havana and had left that morning on a taxi to visit dissident leader Oswaldo Payá. They stopped at the house of dissident Vladimiro Rojas, who would accompany him to the meeting, and when Le Grange got out of the taxi, a very large man ran towards him, punched him in the jaw, threw him to the floor, and, together with another man, started kicking him. A third man threatened the taxi driver and they then stole Le Grange's camera. Months earlier, Le Grange had been detained for two days until the Spanish ambassador had demanded his release. Years later, the policewoman who had taken his report and had left Cuba for Spain contacted Le Grange and reported to him that State Security agents had been among the police who took his report and had made the actual police agents pay for taking it. Bertrand	Rosenthal	France	France	Journalist	Agence France Press, AFP (news agency, France)	Denied entry			1993	As a correspondent in Cuba for AFP for five years who had been sharply reprimanded for writing a story about an egg shortage and summoned three times for reprimands as well as harassed, surveilled, and the brakes to his car cut. After leaving Cuba, he attempted to go back and waited unsuccessfully for an entry visa for 6 months; when he tried to enter on a tourist visa, he was denied entry together with French writer Jean-Francois Fogel, with whom he had written a book published 6 months earlier (June 1993) titled "Fin de siècle à La Havana, les secrets du pouvoir cubain" (Twilight in Havana, the secrets of the Cuban regime). Rosenthal later learned that Fidel Castro had declared him "a traitor" and ordered that he not be allowed to enter the country. Lucia	Newman	USA	USA	Journalist	CNN	Surveilled / Controlled			1997- 2007	Newman established the CNN bureau in Havana 1997 and was the Bureau Chief in Cuba for ten years (1997-2007). After leaving Cuba, she acknowledged that her work had been increasingly "controlled" by the Cuban government and that she was surveilled even in the bathroom at home. This had started to affect her personally and she requested a reassignment, which CNN refused, so she left to join Al Jazeera. In 2012, Newman wrote a piece for Al Jazeera touching on many negative aspects of Cuban healthcare for which she had done no such reporting during her tenure on the island. A report she filed from Cuba on lacking medicines had focused on blaming the US embargo. Andrew	Cawthorne	N/A	N/A	Journalist	Reuters (news agency, U.K.)	Attacked by a government sponsored mob	10	Dec.	1998	Cawthorne, a Reuters cameraman, was covering a small public demonstration organized by the opposition group Lawton Foundation to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights at the Butari Park of 10 de Octubre municipality of Havana. Hundreds of police and State Security agents watched as a mob of members of the Union of Communist Youth and Rapid Response Brigades savagely attack a human rights activist who attempted to read the Declaration and as State Security agents arrested him and two other activists. Cawthorne was then harassed and attacked by the mob.	"Agredidos un opositor y un corresponsal extranjero en Lawton," La Habana, (Angel Pablo Polanco, CPI), CubaNet, Dec. 10, 1998. She was held in Customs, informed she could not enter the country "under orders from above" and forced to board a plane back to Miami four hours later. The President and CEO of América TeVe issued a press release protesting the abuse. This was Romero's fourth trip to Cuba, three as a tourist and one as a journalist to cover the Juanes "Peace without Borders" concert in 2009, during which she had also interviewed two dissident leaders. Juan Camilo	Cruz	Colombia	Germany	Filmmaker	Fundación Ambulante (Colombia)	Detained / Deported	22	Feb.	2017	Cruz was detained by State Security in Havana with his girlfriend (Maria Francisca Corredor) on Feb. 22, 2017 as they prepared to attend later that day the award ceremony of the "Oswaldo Payá Libertad y Vida" award at the hands of Rosa María Paya, President of the Red Latinoamericana de Jóvenes por la Democracia. The award is named after the Cuban dissident leader presumably assassinated by Cuban state actors in 2012. They had tourist visas and Cruz had planned to later spend several days of vacation with his girlfriend. They were both detained for 24 hours, denied all communications (even with the Colombian embassy) and deported. OAS Secretary General Luis Almagro and former Chilean Minister Mariana Alwyn were to receive the awards but were denied entry into Cuba with several other international guests. Cuban independent journalists and members of the peaceful dissident movement were detained or otherwise prevented from attending the ceremony. David	Himbert	Canada	Canada	Freelance	Polaris (France) & Hans Lucas (USA)	Detained / Deported		Nov.	2017	Himbert traveled to Cuba to take photos of the island and decided to attempt photographing the leader of the Ladies in White, Berta Soler, who was under house arrest. She explained to him by telephone that she could not even appear by a window, so he decided to just take pictures of her house. Upon arriving by taxi, he and his translator were immediately arrested by a plainclothes policeman. Taken to the department of State Security, he was interrogated for 3 hours and told that his telephone calls with Soler had been listened to. He was transferred to the Varadero airport without his passport and interrogated again for approximately 4 hours. His belongings were searched, all photos (in his memory cards and hard disk) were confiscated, and he was forced to take a flight back to Montreal that night. Fernando	Ravsberg	Uruguay		Journalist	British Broadcasting Corp., BBC (TV, U.K.)	Accreditation	1	Jun.	2018	Ravsberg was the BBC News correspondent in Cuba for almost 30 years. His accreditation was withdrawn despite his usually favorable coverage of Cuba. He reported that Cuban authorities blamed posts in his blog "Cartas de Cuba." His residency was also withdrawn but, since he was married to a Cuban and had Cubaborn children, he was allowed to stay on the island.
